

Easton Maryland:

The Gloria Richardson Bar Association's 3rd Annual Maryland Eastern Shore Police Chief's Roundtable was held at the Talbot County Free Library in Easton on Friday October 19th. Leaders from 6 mid-shore law enforcement agencies were on-hand to answer a series of questions directed at the current opioid epidemic and how those agencies are reacting to it. The topic also turned to an outstanding discussion between panel members and the audience about police/community relations and how they can work together to ensure that quality lines of communication are encouraged and maintained between law enforcement agencies and the citizens they serve. Audience members included prominent area attorneys, community leaders, school teachers and representatives of United States Senators Benjamin L. Cardin and Chris Van Hollen's Offices. On behalf of all the police leaders in attendance, thank you to the Gloria Richardson Bar Association for hosting this outstanding event.
